Dr. Amy Hamm is a veterinarian who studied at the University of California Davis and has been practicing mixed animal medicine in the Central Oregon area since 2014. She developed a passion for small ruminants while living at the UC Davis Sheep Barn from 2008-2010 where she helped manage and care for the university animals. After starting her own mobile veterinary practice in 2020, she has focused mainly on sheep and goat medicine, herd health and laparoscopic artificial insemination. Outside of veterinary medicine, Dr. Hamm enjoys spending time with her own herd of Boer goats and her two human kids.
